

Blanche A. Jost
June 6, 2005

Each year it is with both sadness and warm memories that I reflect upon some of the special members we have lost since our last annual message. This year is no exception. Some details about each of the individuals clearly represent simply a snapshot of my recollections and fall vastly short of any kind of summary of their individual contributions. In this reflection I often find meaning in the work we do, primarily because life is all about the legacy we leave for future generations.

Blanche Jost– I got to know Blanche Jost initially through her daughter, Connie Jost, for whom our art scholarship is named. It would be hard to say who was the more playful and witty – Blanche or Connie – but in either event there was no denying those amusing genes. Both mother and daughter were artists. Blanche was so very pleased with the scholarship given in her daughter’s name. Each year I would go to see her to deliver the news of the most recent winner. Over lunch she would confide to me that she hoped someday a Vineland student would be honored since Connie grew up and taught there. I assured her that at some point surely the panel would select a Vineland student. Blanche was delighted when that finally happened.
